SUMMARY

The weight of Sol's unrequited feelings for Luna hangs heavy. The ticking clock mirrors the urgency in his heart. A spark ignites within him when he remembers the cat figurine gifted by Luna about the only thing they have in common - a love for cats. When Sol musters his courage on their usual path during lunch break, fate has other plans. Luna takes them on a detour. Sol, his confession plans crumbling, stumbles after her in confusion. He waited, until he couldn't. He hands her a folded note that she reads in silence. To his utter surprise, she tucks the note away and grabs his hand with a determined smile, and urged to continue walking. Awhile goes by, a giant banner explodes into view - "Cat Cafe Grand Opening!" Relief washes over him. Inside, a black and white cat leaps onto his lap, purring. He glances at Luna, who beams with an encouraging smile. A slow, genuine smile spreads across his face - a new chapter unfolds.
